They're looking to hear from those who live and work in Breslau, as well as those interested in travelling to and from Breslau. The project team will use a variety of surveys, workshops, and interviews to ask about where and when future users would like to travel, obstacles to transit use that need to be overcome, and elements of an on-demand service users would like to see. These results will be used to design and implement an on-demand pilot service that reflects the input of all participants.
